

Time Crash

"The hat, the coat, the crickety-crickety stuff... the stick of celery."

The Doctor is travelling alone in the TARDIS when he encounters unexpected turbulence. Suddenly one of his past regenerations appears in the control room – their two TARDISES have merged as the Doctor has forgotten to raise the vessel's shields.

A supermassive black hole has been created by the merger, and while the previous Doctor initially believes his future self to be a fan, the other creates a supernova to counter the black hole. Paradoxically, he remembered this from the memories of his earlier encounter with himself.

The two Doctors offer each other a fond farewell before the past regeneration departs for his own time. A few seconds later, the sound of a horn is heard just before the bow of a huge ship breaks through the walls of the TARDIS. There's never a dull moment...

Playing the Time Crash event card

The presence of previous incarnations can prove very inspirational to the Doctor, although such situations can cause all manner of paradoxes, and should therefore be treated with extreme care.

When this card is played the heroic player may add another Doctor to the game – either a 'new' Doctor (9th incarnation onwards) if a 'classic' Doctor (1st to 8th incarnations) is in play, or vice versa. This new model has the Time Crash status effect.

Time Crash: While a model with this status effect is in play, your 'latest' Doctor (i.e. the one with the highest incarnation) can reroll all Int tests if another Doctor is within 6". When this status effect is removed, the Time Crash has been resolved – remove this model from play.

Time Crash was Doctor Who's brilliant 2007 contribution to the BBC's Children in Need charity appeal, bringing Peter Davison and David Tennant together on screen as the Doctor for the first time.

If you like the (entirely free) Doctor Who Miniatures Game, Crooked Dice would encourage you to do something for charity – the Children in Need website is given below, but there are lots of ways you can help all manner of different charities, local, national, and international. Give money, help out or even just donate your old Doctor in Distress single!
